

Online workshop: How does Pathwork approach evil? An introduction using the three principles of the forces of evil

The year 2024 was (still is) a time of great impact for many of us personally and also planetarily, taking the form of positive change as well as crises and struggles, particularly with outside events. Wars in Ukraine and Israel/Palestine and the contentious US presidential election seemed to hit from the outside, constantly in the news like bombs going off, if only energetically and not literally. Did you find yourself more frequently asking “Is this evil?” “What do I do with my thoughts and confusions about calling something evil?” “Am I supposed to be doing something?”

The Pathwork has very specific answers and methods for working with evil. These can be pivotal tools to help us orient in the midst of chaos and move through the seeming onslaught with groundedness, confidence, and personal efficacy.

Would you like to create the repeatable experience of transitioning from despair, helplessness, and/or rage, to feeling centered, insightful, and even productive when you sense evil and the inner conflict it engenders? If so, please join me to explore one of the Guide’s simple but potent teachings on evil: The three forces of evil—Separation, materialism, and half-truth. You will learn a specific process to use this material in daily life in a tangible, meaningful way.
